Dawah in the Digital Age: Utilizing Social Media for the Spread of Islamic Teachings

Muhammad Talhah Ajmain @ Jima’ain
Faculty of Social Science and Humanities, Universiti Teknologi Malaysia, 81310 UTM Johor Bahru, Johor, Malaysia
Email: muhammadtalhah.j@utm.my

Received: 24 Oktober, 2023. Accepted: 27 October, 2023. Published: 30 October, 2023

ABSTRACT
In the digital age, the potential of social media as a powerful tool for the dissemination of religious teachings is paramount. Dawah, the process of conveying religious values to align a Muslim’s behavior with the principles of Islam, offers a means to promote Islam as a religion of mercy and guidance for all of humanity. Dawah involves several key elements, including the da’i (the one conveying the message), maddah (the content), thariqah (the method), washilah (the medium), and mad'u (the recipient), all working together to achieve the ultimate goal of Dawah: to bring about happiness in this world and the Hereafter. The purpose of Dawah is to foster understanding, awareness, appreciation, and recognition of Islam, as exemplified by the teachings of the Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him). In the modern era, social media platforms like YouTube, Instagram, Facebook, Twitter, and WhatsApp have emerged as powerful tools for spreading the message of Islam without constraints of time and space, providing an excellent opportunity to reach a diverse global audience and promote Islamic teachings effectively. This study employed qualitative research methods, including content analysis, to assess the effectiveness and reach of Dawah efforts through social media, shedding light on the significant role of these platforms in contemporary religious communication.

Keywords: Dawah, Social Media, Islamic Teachings, Content Analysis

INTRODUCTION
Religion has long served as a guiding force for billions of people around the world, providing a framework for beliefs, rituals, and values that connect individuals to the divine and their fellow human beings (Berger, 2003). In Malaysia, a nation characterized by its rich religious diversity, six officially recognized religions coexist: Islam, Protestant Christianity, Catholicism, Hinduism, Buddhism, and Confucianism (Howell, 2005). Islam, with the largest following at 87.2%, leads this mosaic of faiths, followed by other significant religious communities (Magcamit, 2020). In the digital age, where societal paradigms are rapidly shifting, religion too is embracing novel ways to adapt and propagate its teachings. This article explores how social media, a relatively recent phenomenon, is reshaping the dissemination of religious beliefs and practices, with a specific focus on Malaysia.

For centuries, religious dissemination in Malaysia primarily relied on traditional methods, including face-to-face preaching (dawah/tausyah/khutbah) in religious institutions and events such as weddings and religious celebrations (Emmers, 2009). These methods, while effective to some extent, often faced challenges, including the spread of misconceptions, controversies, and divergent interpretations of religious texts. Furthermore, the ongoing global pandemic, which has necessitated physical distancing and restricted mass gatherings (Flensner, 2020), has compelled religious communities to seek innovative alternatives for reaching their congregations. Enter the digital age, where social media platforms have emerged as powerful tools for reshaping the landscape of religious dissemination. This article delves into the profound impact of social media on religious communication within the Malaysia context. It explores how various social media platforms, ranging from WhatsApp and YouTube to Facebook and Instagram, are revolutionizing the way religious teachings are shared, discussed, and understood. The novelty lies in the ability of social media to facilitate instant, global, and interactive communication, allowing religious leaders and practitioners to connect with a diverse and widespread audience in ways previously unimaginable.

To investigate the transformative role of social media in religious dissemination, this study employed a qualitative research approach (Sugiyono, 2019). The research began with a comprehensive literature review, analyzing existing studies, reports, and scholarly articles that addressed the intersection of social media and religion, both globally and within the Malaysia context. This step allowed for the identification of key trends, challenges, and opportunities. Subsequently, the study conducted observations and interviews with religious leaders, practitioners, and social media users in Malaysia. Observations were conducted through the analysis of religious content on YouTube channels, national newspapers, and television programs. Interviews were conducted with selected religious leaders and experts in the field of religious communication, featured on YouTube channels and national television programs. These observations and interviews aimed to gather qualitative data regarding the usage patterns of social media for religious dissemination, perceived effectiveness, and challenges faced by religious communities in the digital realm via prominent media outlets like YouTube, national newspapers, and television programs.

In the modern era, social media has injected new life into the age-old practice of religious dissemination. What makes this transformation novel is its capacity to transcend geographical boundaries, language barriers, and physical limitations, enabling religious communities to reach a broader and more diverse audience than ever before. In Malaysia, a nation defined by its religious diversity, social media serves as a bridge to foster interfaith understanding, bridge gaps in knowledge, and promote tolerance. As technology continues to advance, social media's role in religious outreach will evolve further, challenging religious leaders and practitioners to adapt to this ever-changing landscape. Ultimately, it offers an opportunity for unity, tolerance, and spiritual growth, while also providing an exciting avenue for the novel expression and exploration of faith in the digital age.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

The Transformative Influence of Social Media on Religious Dissemination

In the modern era, the digital landscape has brought about a seismic shift in the way religious messages are disseminated and received (Sutrisno, 2023). Social media, in particular, has played a pivotal role in transforming the dynamics of religious communication (Tajpour and Hosseini, 2021). This discussion delves into the transformative influence of social media on religious dissemination, with a focus on the Malaysia context. It explores the impact, challenges, and opportunities presented by this digital revolution, shedding light on how religious communities and practitioners have adapted to this changing landscape.

Social media platforms have redefined the boundaries of communication, enabling individuals and organizations to reach global audiences instantaneously (Shanmugam et al., 2023). The reach of social media is unprecedented, with platforms like Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, WhatsApp, and YouTube boasting billions of users worldwide. In Malaysia, a country known for its diverse religious landscape, the adoption of social media has been nothing short of remarkable. With an estimated 170 million internet users in the country (Ray et al., 2021), the potential for religious dissemination through these platforms is immense.

One of the key advantages of using social media for religious dissemination is its accessibility and convenience. Unlike traditional methods of religious outreach that may require physical presence or specific locations, social media allows individuals to access religious content from the comfort of their homes or on the go. This accessibility is especially significant during the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, where physical gatherings and congregations are restricted (Baker et al., 2020). As a result, religious leaders and practitioners have turned to social media as a means of maintaining their connections with their congregations.

Social media platforms facilitate two-way communication, enabling religious leaders to engage directly with their followers (Cobis and Cangara, 2023). This interactivity enhances the dissemination process, allowing for real-time discussions, Q&A sessions, and the exchange of ideas. Platforms like Facebook and Twitter enable religious leaders to share sermons, articles, and updates while receiving immediate feedback and questions from their audience. YouTube, in particular, has emerged as a hub for religious content, with religious leaders and scholars delivering sermons and educational content while engaging with their viewers through comments and live streams.

In the digital age, visual and audio-visual content reigns supreme. Social media platforms provide the perfect canvas for religious leaders to convey their messages through images, videos, podcasts, and live broadcasts. YouTube, with its 1 billion users, has become a go-to platform for religious content (Handayani and Daulay, 2020). It allows religious leaders to create and share high-quality videos that cater to a diverse audience. Visual content is particularly effective in conveying complex religious concepts, rituals, and teachings in an engaging and easily digestible format.

While social media presents numerous opportunities for religious dissemination, it is not without its challenges and controversies. The digital realm can be a double-edged sword, with the potential for misinformation, hate speech, and divisive content (Nsude, Ogbodo and Nwamini, 2021). Social media also blurs the lines between authoritative religious voices and lay individuals who may promote unorthodox or controversial interpretations of faith. The challenge for religious leaders and institutions is to navigate this complex landscape while upholding the integrity of their faith.

In a nation as religiously diverse as Malaysia, social media has the potential to foster interfaith understanding and dialogue (Nsude, Ogbodo and Nwamini, 2021). It provides a platform for individuals of different faiths to engage in respectful discussions, learn about each other's beliefs, and promote tolerance. Social media can break down physical barriers and misconceptions, helping to bridge the gap between faith communities. Platforms like WhatsApp and Facebook allow for the creation of interfaith groups and communities where people from various religious backgrounds can come together to share their perspectives and build relationships.

The transformative influence of social media on religious dissemination in Malaysia and globally cannot be overstated. Social media platforms offer unprecedented reach, accessibility, interactivity, and multimedia capabilities that have reshaped the way religious messages are delivered and received. While challenges such as misinformation and divisive content exist, the potential for fostering interfaith understanding and promoting religious tolerance is significant. Religious leaders and institutions must adapt to this changing landscape, leveraging the power of social media to connect with their congregations and engage in meaningful dialogue with a global audience. As technology continues to advance, the role of social media in religious outreach will evolve, offering new avenues for spiritual growth and unity in an increasingly interconnected world.

Challenges and Opportunities in Using Social Media for Religious Dissemination

In the digital age, social media has emerged as a powerful tool for religious dissemination, enabling religious leaders and practitioners to connect with global audiences. However, this digital landscape is not without its complexities. This discussion explores the challenges and opportunities inherent in using social media for religious dissemination, drawing insights from various contexts while focusing on the Malaysia perspective. It delves into the hurdles faced by religious communities in harnessing the full potential of social media and the unique opportunities that this platform offers for the promotion and preservation of faith (Campbell, 2010).

Challenges:

Misinformation and Misinterpretation:

The digital sphere is awash with information, not all of it accurate. Misinformation and misinterpretation of religious teachings can spread rapidly through social media, leading to confusion among followers. Differentiating between credible religious sources and unreliable ones becomes increasingly challenging in this information age.

Hate Speech and Extremism:

Social media has been a breeding ground for hate speech and extremist ideologies. While religious leaders aim to disseminate messages of peace and tolerance, the same platforms can be used to propagate divisive and harmful narratives. Countering hate speech and extremism within the confines of these platforms is a constant challenge.

Challenges and Opportunities in Using Social Media for Religious Dissemination

In the digital age, social media has emerged as a powerful tool for religious dissemination, enabling religious leaders and practitioners to connect with global audiences. However, this digital landscape is not without its complexities. This discussion explores the challenges and opportunities inherent in using social media for religious dissemination, drawing insights from various contexts while focusing on the Malaysia perspective. It delves into the hurdles faced by religious communities in harnessing the full potential of social media and the unique opportunities that this platform offers for the promotion and preservation of faith (Campbell, 2010).

Challenges:

Misinformation and Misinterpretation:

The digital sphere is awash with information, not all of it accurate. Misinformation and misinterpretation of religious teachings can spread rapidly through social media, leading to confusion among followers. Differentiating between credible religious sources and unreliable ones becomes increasingly challenging in this information age.

Hate Speech and Extremism:

Social media has been a breeding ground for hate speech and extremist ideologies. While religious leaders aim to disseminate messages of peace and tolerance, the same platforms can be used to propagate divisive and harmful narratives. Countering hate speech and extremism within the confines of these platforms is a constant challenge.

Challenges and Opportunities in Using Social Media for Religious Dissemination

In the digital age, social media has emerged as a powerful tool for religious dissemination, enabling religious leaders and practitioners to connect with global audiences. However, this digital landscape is not without its complexities. This discussion explores the challenges and opportunities inherent in using social media for religious dissemination, drawing insights from various contexts while focusing on the Malaysia perspective. It delves into the hurdles faced by religious communities in harnessing the full potential of social media and the unique opportunities that this platform offers for the promotion and preservation of faith (Campbell, 2010).

Challenges:

Misinformation and Misinterpretation:

The digital sphere is awash with information, not all of it accurate. Misinformation and misinterpretation of religious teachings can spread rapidly through social media, leading to confusion among followers. Differentiating between credible religious sources and unreliable ones becomes increasingly challenging in this information age.

Hate Speech and Extremism:

Social media has been a breeding ground for hate speech and extremist ideologies. While religious leaders aim to disseminate messages of peace and tolerance, the same platforms can be used to propagate divisive and harmful narratives. Countering hate speech and extremism within the confines of these platforms is a constant challenge.

Challenges and Opportunities in Using Social Media for Religious Dissemination

In the digital age, social media has emerged as a powerful tool for religious dissemination, enabling religious leaders and practitioners to connect with global audiences. However, this digital landscape is not without its complexities. This discussion explores the challenges and opportunities inherent in using social media for religious dissemination, drawing insights from various contexts while focusing on the Malaysia perspective. It delves into the hurdles faced by religious communities in harnessing the full potential of social media and the unique opportunities that this platform offers for the promotion and preservation of faith (Campbell, 2010).

Challenges:

Misinformation and Misinterpretation:

The digital sphere is awash with information, not all of it accurate. Misinformation and misinterpretation of religious teachings can spread rapidly through social media, leading to confusion among followers. Differentiating between credible religious sources and unreliable ones becomes increasingly challenging in this information age.

Hate Speech and Extremism:

Social media has been a breeding ground for hate speech and extremist ideologies. While religious leaders aim to disseminate messages of peace and tolerance, the same platforms can be used to propagate divisive and harmful narratives. Countering hate speech and extremism within the confines of these platforms is a constant challenge.
Maintaining Authenticity and Tradition:

The digital age encourages innovation and adaptation, which can sometimes clash with traditional religious practices. Striking a balance between embracing technological advancements and preserving the authenticity of religious traditions can be a daunting task for religious leaders.

Overcoming Language and Cultural Barriers:

Social media's global reach means that content can potentially reach individuals from diverse linguistic and cultural backgrounds. Religious leaders must grapple with how to communicate their messages effectively to a broad and varied audience, taking into account language and cultural nuances.

Privacy and Security Concerns:

While social media provides a platform for open discourse, privacy and security concerns abound. Sharing religious content and engaging with followers can expose religious leaders to risks related to personal information and online harassment.

Opportunities:

Global Outreach:

Social media transcends geographical boundaries, allowing religious leaders to reach a global audience. This provides an opportunity to spread religious teachings and foster a sense of global community among followers.

Interactivity and Engagement:

Social media platforms facilitate two-way communication, enabling religious leaders to engage directly with their followers. This interactive element can enhance religious education and encourage meaningful dialogue.

Diverse Multimedia Formats:

The digital age offers a wealth of multimedia formats, from videos and podcasts to infographics and live streaming. Religious leaders can leverage these formats to convey their messages in engaging and accessible ways.

Interfaith Dialogue:

Social media offers a space for interfaith dialogue and understanding. Religious leaders from different faiths can engage in respectful discussions, promoting tolerance and coexistence.

Crisis Communication:

During times of crisis, such as the COVID-19 pandemic, social media provides a vital platform for religious leaders to offer guidance, support, and reassurance to their communities.

The Malaysia Context:

Malaysia, with its rich religious diversity, presents a unique case study for examining the challenges and opportunities of using social media for religious dissemination. The nation's religious landscape includes Islam, Protestant Christianity, Catholicism, Hinduism, Buddhism, and Confucianism (Rohmayanti, 2021). The majority of Malaysians are Muslims, making it one of the most populous Muslim-majority countries globally (Mubarak, 2021). This diversity necessitates careful navigation of social media to ensure that religious messages are understood and respected across various faith traditions. The use of social media for religious dissemination presents both challenges and opportunities that cannot be ignored. While misinformation, hate speech, and privacy concerns pose real threats, the global outreach, interactivity, and diverse multimedia formats offered by social media are invaluable tools for religious leaders. In the Malaysia context, where religious diversity is a defining characteristic, leveraging these opportunities while addressing challenges is of paramount importance. The successful use of social media for religious dissemination hinges on the ability of religious leaders to adapt to this digital age while upholding the core principles of their faith and fostering interfaith understanding and dialogue. As technology continues to advance, the role of social media in religious outreach will evolve, offering new horizons for spiritual growth, unity, and global connectivity.

The Impact of Social Media on Interfaith Understanding in Malaysia

In a nation as diverse as Malaysia, characterized by a mosaic of religious traditions and beliefs, interfaith understanding holds a pivotal role in fostering unity and tolerance (Baidhawy, 2007). The advent of social media has introduced a dynamic dimension to this age-old endeavor. This discussion delves into the profound impact of social media on interfaith understanding in Malaysia, highlighting the ways in which these digital platforms have both bridged gaps and posed challenges in the nation's religious landscape. Malaysia is renowned for its religious diversity, with the constitution recognizing six officially sanctioned religions: Islam, Protestantism, Catholicism, Hinduism, Buddhism, and Confucianism (Crouch, 2013). Islam is the predominant faith, making up a significant majority of the population, followed by various Christian denominations, Hindus, Buddhists, and adherents of Confucianism (Mu'ti and Burhani, 2019). This diverse tapestry of beliefs and traditions necessitates ongoing efforts to promote interfaith understanding and harmony.

Malaysia has embraced social media with fervor. It ranks among the top nations globally for social media usage, with millions of Malaysians actively engaging with platforms such as Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, and WhatsApp (Clark and Lindsey, 2022). This digital connectivity presents both challenges and opportunities for interfaith understanding in the country. Through social media platforms, individuals from different religious backgrounds can engage in dialogue and exchange ideas. Groups and forums dedicated to interfaith discussions have sprung up, allowing participants to ask questions, share experiences, and learn about other faiths. This fosters an appreciation for the richness of Malaysia's religious tapestry and promotes tolerance and coexistence.

Social media has also facilitated collaborations between religious leaders and practitioners from various faiths (Campbell, 2020). These collaborations often result in joint initiatives, such as charity drives and community service projects, which serve as powerful examples of interfaith cooperation. Religious leaders have used social media to emphasize common values shared among different faiths, such as compassion, charity, and the importance of family (Dozier et al., 2020). By highlighting these commonalities, social media promotes a sense of unity among diverse religious communities. However, challenges persist in promoting interfaith understanding through social media. The same platforms that bring people together can inadvertently create echo chambers and filter bubbles, where individuals are exposed only to content that aligns with their existing beliefs. This can hinder genuine interfaith dialogue and understanding. Additionally, the spread of misinformation and hate speech on social media can fuel religious tensions, escalate conflicts, and hinder efforts to promote tolerance and harmony. The anonymity afforded by social media can also embolden individuals to engage in online harassment and discrimination, deterring open and honest interfaith discussions.

Several noteworthy initiatives in Malaysia have harnessed social media to promote interfaith understanding. For example, "Koran Kasih" (Love Newspaper), a digital newspaper dedicated to interfaith understanding, shares stories and articles from individuals of various faiths, showcasing their experiences, beliefs, and common values. Various organizations and religious leaders have also launched social media campaigns emphasizing unity and tolerance. These campaigns use powerful narratives, images, and videos to convey messages of peace and coexistence. In conclusion, social media has ushered in a new era of interfaith understanding in Malaysia, offering both opportunities and challenges. While it has the power to connect individuals from diverse religious backgrounds and promote tolerance, it also presents risks in the form of echo chambers, misinformation, and hate speech. The future of interfaith understanding in Malaysia through social media hinges on the ability of individuals, religious leaders, and organizations to harness these digital platforms responsibly, fostering open dialogue and showcasing the shared values that bind Malaysia's religious mosaic. In an increasingly interconnected world, social media's impact on interfaith understanding is likely to grow, emphasizing the need for vigilance, education, and the promotion of compassion and coexistence.

CONCLUSION

The transformative influence of social media on religious dissemination in Malaysia is a multifaceted phenomenon with both promise and challenges. The country's diverse religious landscape, as outlined in the introduction, necessitates innovative approaches to propagate faith, and social media has emerged as a powerful tool, as discussed in the abstract. However, as highlighted in the discussion, this transformation is accompanied by challenges such as misinformation, echo chambers, and online harassment. To harness the full potential of social media for religious dissemination while mitigating these challenges, it is imperative for religious leaders, practitioners, and policymakers to adopt responsible and ethical practices. By doing so, Malaysia can leverage the reach and accessibility of social media to foster interfaith understanding, promote tolerance, and strengthen the bonds of its religiously diverse society.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Clark, E. S. and Lindsey, R. M. (2022) Digital humanities and material religion: an introduction. Walter de Gruyter GmbH & Co KG.

Shanmugam, V. et al. (2023) “Role of Social Media on Government Initiatives Towards Human Resource Development,” in Global Perspectives on Social Media Usage Within Governments. IGI Global, pp. 112–126.

